Aurora Australis in Antarctica

2 ???· Jessica lived with a small team in complete isolation during the harsh Antarctic winter where the Sun doesn't rise for four months and temperatures plunge as low as -85°C. Concordia is one of the most remote places on Earth; the closest humans at Vostok station are 600 km away, making it more isolated than the International Space Station.

Antarctic

The Nevada Grenchen's Antarctic has stood the test of nature's most dire conditions in the most treacherous place down under. The watch has battled with snow, rain and sleet as Admiral Byrd depended his life on this robust timepiece during Operation Deep Freeze. Beige Luminous. from $845.00 "Close (esc)" Quick view. When Barry met Steve: aurora watcher captures rare hot glow over Antarctica

Not a person, but a luminous purple, green or white arc that appears in the night sky, often in association with auroras. STEVEs are still a bit of a mystery to science, although amateur photographers and night-sky watchers have documented them for decades.

Uncovering the Auroras

Most frequently seen in the skies of high-latitude regions around the Arctic and Antarctic, the auroras appear as a diffuse glow or as a luminous curtain-like shape, sometimes forming relatively static arcs or flowing, nebulous shapes known as "active aurora."
