These storage units will keep moisture from accumulating and seeping into your electronic, motor-driven, rust-prone devices. Climate-controlled storage lockers are a sure-fire way to preserve all of your belongings in good shape. General Tips to Storing Items During Winter. Storage during winter is tricky.

As we head straight into the middle of winter, you may want to consider self-storage to protect seasonal items that can't be used during the cold months. If you live in a climate that has freezing temperatures during winter, it is important to protect your seasonal belongings from winter-related damage.

Total Locker Service provides a comprehensive range of lockers designed to meet the challenges of winter. Their offerings include both standard and heated lockers, tailored to various needs and environments, ensuring that winter storage requirements are thoroughly addressed.

In a refrigerator, the temperature should be kept below 40°F which prevents the growth of harmful bacteria that can cause food poisoning. In Pennsylvania, the temperature can fluctuate above and below 40°F day-to-day or overnight. There can also be a significant difference between the temperature in the sun versus the shade.
