Overview

What are the best types of hair extensions?

The best types of hair extensions can instantly add volume, body, and length to your natural look. There are four main types of hair extensions—bonded, weaves, tape-ins, and clip-ins—and most are available in natural hair, synthetic fiber hair, or a mix of both.

What are human hair extensions?

Human hair extensions are exactly what they sound like. They are made out of real, human hair from top to bottom, collected from a donor. Remy hair means all the cuticles (the outer layer of the hair) are intact, running in the same direction at the time of collection.

Where do Great Lengths Hair Extensions come from?

Great Lengths is beloved by consumers who want to know where and from whom their natural hair extensions are sourced. The brand buys its Remy raw hair from Indian temples, which receive it through voluntary donations and use the proceeds to support local charities.

What is a classic clip-in & a single hair extension weft?

Our classic clip-ins feature lace-weft technology that supports more volume for a total transformation. Single hair extension wefts designed to add extra lift and dimension to your look. Change your look to last a mood, a moment or more. It's never been easier than with ready-to-wear ponytails, wigs & volumizing wefts.

Are hair extensions a good investment?

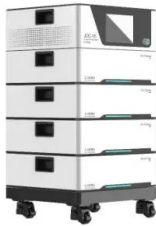

Nowadays, you can count on extensions for versatile tape-ins, bundles for the age-old sew-in, or clip-ins you can easily attach yourself. Our experts agree though, that extensions should be considered an investment and treated as such. “For maintaining hair extensions, it’s very important to treat them like it's your natural hair.

Are clip-in hair extensions worth it?

For what it's worth, unless you're looking to get your hair extensions professionally installed, you'll probably be in the market for clip-in hair extensions or temporary hair pieces, like ponytail extensions, headband wigs, or clip-in bangs. But if you want your extensions to last longer and look realistic?
