Overview

What curling rods should I use for thick hair?

For thick hair, he advises using large curling rods or wave formers, explaining that having multiple curling devices will help divide the hair so that it can dry properly as the curls set. He says that fine hair agrees with satin rods that provide “gentle curling”—particularly when used with a mousse.

Are curling rods better than rollers?

According to Maine, curling rods are “great for tight, spiral curls.” Headbands, he adds, “create loose, beachy waves,” while rollers—depending on their size— can create curls that range from tight to big and bouncy. Meanwhile, wave formers, “give you a more defined wave pattern, and work wonders on most hair types,” he says.

How long does a Silke London curler last?

Why we love it: Silke London provides all the fixings for curls on the go, packing a cushy curling rod, two hair ties, and a floral-patterned clip into a sleek cosmetics case. Best used on damp hair, the curler provides big, bouncy curls in four to eight hours—and its silky material keeps hair hydrated all the while.

What is a Smart Curling system?

At the touch of one button, the smart curling system rolls your hair evenly onto the barrel – as if a professional stylist is working. The innovative open design follows the flow of your hair, giving you glamorous and long-lasting curls.

How many styling options does a curler have?

Automatic curls with 27 styling options (3 timer settings x 3 temperature settings x 3 curl direction settings). (inclusive of Auto Curler and Heated Straightening Brush in a luxurious style care).

How do you use a hair curler?

However many you use, wrap the hair around the rod, roll it up toward the scalp, then clamp the rod in place and let the curls set. If you're using rollers: Sponge, foam, or velcro rollers can also provide heat-free curls. Simply wrap sections of the hair around the curlers, clip them in—and prepare to wait.
