Overview

You have no reputation to fall back on, no friend to recommend you, no non-verbal cues for him/her to pick up on as they would have if you.

It may sound counter-intuitive, but starting off with a compliment is a sure-fire way to come across as disingenuous. Girls talk, and we've discovered that if a guy adds one girl from a group, he's added several. Your opening.

Slow down. No matter how well-intentioned and "good" of a person you are, unsolicited friend requests automatically place you at a disadvantage. Take a moment to put yourself in the other person's shoes and think.

On the heels of empty flattery, some men then express their desire for a conversation, a friendship, a date, or more. Why would you expect this?

How can you know you want.

Whatever form of connection you crave, I sincerely hope you find it, and I hope you go about finding it in a way that affords the greatest chance of coming across as the wonderful human that you are. So please, no random friend.

China's WeChat is a site for social interaction, a form of currency, a dating app, a tool for sporting teams and deliverer of news: Twitter, Facebook, Googlemaps, Tinder and Apple Pay all rolled into one. But it is also an ever more powerful weapon of social control for the Chinese government.

Should you accept random WeChat friends?

In all my time of accepting random friend requests on WeChat (and I do so out of sheer curiosity), I can honestly say none of them have led to any kind of meaningful conversation, friendship, or a date. Here are a few points to think about before you add a stranger from a random WeChat group.
