Solar Power System Home Scam

Overview

Door-to-door sales are innately pushy, and an aggressive salesperson is always a bad sign in business. Door-to-door salespeople are usually trying to make a quick buck and may rush along your decision-making process by making elaborate promises. In the world of solar panels, this may look like a person.

Whether it's door-to-door or online, a forceful salesperson might inform you that a certain deal, like a financing rate or an incentive program, will only remain available for a short period.

There is plenty of diversity in the world of solar panels, with ample brands to choose from based on your needs, your price range and the architecture.

We've all been sent scammy emails and they'll slip through because it looks much more official than it is. Steer clear of any emails, social media posts or pop-ups that boast unlikely amenities.

Many solar panel companies will claim to potential customers that the federal solar tax credit will soon be eradicated. As a matter of fact, the federal solar tax credit currently sits at 30% and.

Solar panel scams target homeowners interested in installing solar energy systems. They involve scammers making false promises or tricking you into paying for services you'll never receive.
