Overview

Does Xinjiang use forced labor to make solar panels?

Allegations have been raised before that forced labor in Xinjiang has been used to produce polysilicon, a key component for making solar panels. But this latest research indicates that the practice is also used in the mining and processing of quartz, the raw material at the very start of the solar panel supply chain.

Who makes illuminate solar panels?

Illuminate is a joint venture between Chinese solar equipment maker Longi (601012.SS) and U.S. clean energy project developer Invenergy. The company started producing solar panels at a five-gigawatt plant in Pataskala, Ohio in February. It aims to be at full capacity by the end of 2024 and will employ 1,000 workers.

Will Xinjiang & China produce solar panels?

Xinjiang will produce about half of the polysilicon in these panels, based on BNEF projections, and China will account for more than 80% of the overall supply. But consumers can't track the provenance of their panels, since raw materials from multiple factories mix together along the solar supply chain.

Where is runergy building a solar module plant?

Runergy is building a five-GW solar module plant in Huntsville, Alabama in a factory previously occupied by a DVD manufacturer. The company said the factory will create 800 jobs and will begin shipping products to customers this summer.

Are Xinjiang's polysilicon refineries a state-run employment program?

Three owners of Xinjiang's polysilicon refineries have been linked to a state-run employment program that, according to some foreign governments and academics, may at times amount to forced labor. China denies such accusations and recently insisted that journalists and diplomats are free to go see for themselves.
