Smart student lockers offer university and college students, faculty, and staff secure storage for their belongings in the library, classroom, lab, gym, or anywhere else on campus. This kind of student locker is equipped with advanced technology, providing an extra layer of security and convenience.

This standard or custom locker serves as the one unique spot on campus aside from their dorm that is designated solely for their use during their college years. A beautifully designed, state-of-the-art locker room can even help with the recruitment of students for whom a campus locker is essential.

Steel parcel lockers, a built-in photo capture system, plus the smart tech in the electronic lockers make it virtually impossible to steal packages. Plus, providing on-demand package access using university retail parcel lockers in undergraduate student housing and graduate housing areas can reduce long waits in residence life offices or campus .

If the lockers aren't large enough for your main backpack, use the lockers to keep your laptop, camera, tablet, e-reader, hard drive, money and passport locked up while you're out exploring. That way, if someone grabs your backpack, there won't be anything important or expensive in there. What is a dorm lock?

It's essentially a huge metal mesh that you place over your backpack and lock to your dorm bed. It's highly secure and will usually deter most thieves. The downside, of course, is that you're instantly advertising to everybody in the room that you have something very valuable that you want to protect.

Do students lock their dorm doors when they leave?

However, it is shocking and absurd that almost 40% students don't lock their dorm doors when they leave. To ensure your dorm security, it does make sense to remind yourself and your roommates to lock the dorm room doors and windows when you are away or asleep, even if you are running to the restroom for a minute.

What is the best lock for a locker?

A combination lock is the best lock for a locker as it saves you from carrying a key. The reason for more than one padlock is that each locker will have a different size latch. Many hostels don't have 24-hour security, but the reception is usually manned till late, which adds an extra layer of protection.
